Dems Hit GOP Over Iraq Intel

Report cites increased terror threat, fueling war of words

WASHINGTON | Democrats on Sunday seized on an intelligence assessment that said the Iraq war has increased the terrorist threat, saying it was further evidence that Americans should choose new leadership in the November mid-term elections.

Their criticisms came in a collection of statements sent to reporters Sunday amid the disclosure of a National Intelligence Estimate that concluded the war has helped create a new generation of Islamic radicalism and that the overall terrorist threat has grown since the Sept. 11 attacks.

The report represented a consensus view of the 16 disparate spy services inside the government, according to an intelligence official. The official, confirming accounts first published in Sunday's New York Times and Washington Post, spoke on condition of anonymity because the report is classified.

"Press reports say our nation's intelligence services have confirmed that President Bush's repeated missteps in Iraq and his stubborn refusal to change course have made America less safe," said Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid. "No election-year White House PR campaign can hide this truth."

A White House spokesman, Blair Jones, said, "We don't comment on classified documents." But he said the published accounts' "characterization of the NIE is not representative of the complete document." NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

Gee, He Never Used to Be Able to Reel in a Fish That Big by Himself

World Angling Championships competitors were surprised last week to find that they were required to submit to drug tests, the Sunday Mirror reported. The tournament's winners were asked to give urine samples or they would be stripped of their prizes; all passed the tests. Officials said stimulants could unfairly sharpen the reflexes of an angler when he got a nibble. League authorities want angling to be recognized by the International Olympic Committee as an official sport — and drug tests would be in accordance with Olympic standards. "I thought it was a wind-up. ... I was convinced someone was having a laugh," third-place finisher Sean Ashby said. (EXPRESS)

III. Woman's Kids Likely Drowned

Police discover bodies of 3 children stuffed into washer and dryer

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL. | A woman accused of killing a pregnant woman and her fetus told police she drowned the woman's three young children and stuffed them into a washer and dryer at their apartment, an official said Sunday.

Preliminary autopsies on the dead children Sunday appear to show they were drowned, Ace Hart, a deputy St. Clair County coroner, said.

As of Sunday, Tiffany Hall, 24, had not been charged in the children's deaths, but prosecutors on Saturday accused Hall of killing their mother, Jimella Tunstall, 23, and her fetus. The fetus had been cut from her womb, authorities said.

A family photo shows 7-year-old Demond, 2-year-old Ivan, and 1-year-old Jinella Tunstall, who were found in a washer and dryer after their mother was killed.

According to Sunday's autopsies, there were no signs of physical abuse or trauma on the children — ages 7, 2, and 1 — and toxicology tests were pending "to see if they were poisoned or possibly drugged," Hart said. "They were not drowned there in the wash machine," Hart said.

On Sunday, the community turned to prayer to understand the slayings at a service for the slain family.

Authorities suspect Tunstall was slain on or about Sept. 15.

That day, Hall summoned police to a park, saying she had given birth to a stillborn child, Hart said. She was arrested after she told her boyfriend during the baby's funeral that the baby was not his and that she had killed the mother to get it, authorities said.

12 Dead as Midwest Storms Subside

Flood warnings remain in effect for 3 states hit by two days of rains

LOUISVILLE, KY. | Stormy weather blamed for 12 deaths in the Midwest and South subsided on Sunday, though residents in some states remained shut out of their homes due to high waters.

Flood warnings remained in effect for parts of Arkansas, Kentucky and Missouri. Many

Many streets in Louisville, Ky., were left submerged Saturday after the storms.

Kentucky roads were still submerged on Sunday, but waters in many areas began to recede.

The storms that hit parts of Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri and Tennessee Friday and Saturday, forced others from their homes and left thousands without power.

The death toll in Kentucky reached eight. Two deaths were reported in Arkansas, and in Illinois, two elderly women died in a lightning-related fire. (AP)

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. | Police arrested three teenagers Saturday in the beating of a homeless man in a park.

The charges stem from an attack on William Teeters, 44, who was left bleeding and bruised in the park Wednesday night, police said. He was later treated at a hospital. (AP)

Frist: Vote on Border Soon

Senate leader predicts political wrangling on immigration measure

WASHINGTON | Maneuvering toward a pre-election showdown on immigration, Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist on Sunday said he would seek passage of legislation this week to secure the borders and predicted Democrats would resist.

"Right now I got a feeling the Democrats may obstruct it," said Frist, R-Tenn.

The bill is all that is left of a comprehensive immigration proposal generally backed by President Bush that included provisions for a guest worker program and ways for an estimated 12 million illegal immigrants to work toward legal status and eventual citizenship.

Frist led a bipartisan effort to pass that measure this year, but House Republicans opposed it as too lenient on immigrants in the country illegally.

Jim Manley, a spokesman for Senate Democratic leader Harry Reid of Nevada, accused Frist of playing politics by seeking to blame Democrats. Frist's move is an attempt to cover up his failure to push through more comprehensive changes, Manley said.

In December, the House passed legislation that concentrated on border security and enforcement of laws banning employment of undocumented workers; the Senate in May then passed its broader bill. Since then, there's been no progress in efforts to reconcile the two bills.

Frist said he is willing to push ahead with a narrower bill favored by House Republicans that would require the building of a 700-mile fence along the U.S.-Mexico border at a cost of billions of dollars. Even so, action may not be possible before the November elections, he said.

Hundreds in La. Mark Progress After Rita

Anniversary service honors victims, state's recovery from storm

LAKE CHARLES, LA. | Hundreds gathered Sunday for a church service to mark the anniversary of Hurricane Rita, a year that Gov. Kathleen Blanco called "the longest year of our lives."

"Where there was devastation, there is reconstruction. There is rebirthing," pastor Jerry Snider of Lake Charles' Christian World Church said in a prayer.

The nondenominational service, featuring scriptural readings and spirited singing, was held in this city's civic center. The facility had served as a staging point for aid workers after Rita hit on Sept. 24, 2005, less than one month after Hurricane Katrina devastated the Louisiana and Mississippi coasts.

"As the dawn rises on this next year, I feel the warmth of progress," Blanco told the crowd.

Category 3 Rita struck along the Texas-Louisiana border, killing at least 11 people in two states. More than 100 died in the pre-storm evacuation of Houston, in accidents and exposure deaths. DOUG SIMPSON (AP)

Helicopters Join Weeks-Long Fight Against Wildfires

OJAI, CALIF. | Helicopters lifted off as winds calmed Sunday, ferrying water and transporting firefighters to battle a three-week-old wildfire that has scorched more than 200 square miles of the Los Padres National Forest.

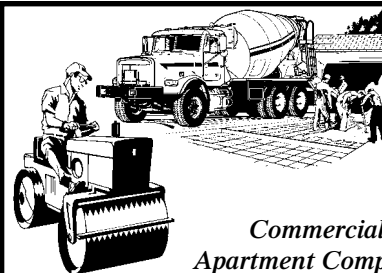

Hot, dry Santa Ana winds appeared to be picking up by late morning but were still somewhat tamer than in recent days, reducing the risk of the blaze spreading and allowing more firefighters to go to work.

The forecast called for winds of 15 mph with gusts of up to 40 mph. Late Saturday, authorities urged the evacuation of about 300 houses and a college east of Ojai. The order was voluntary and came after the fierce winds blew embers past the lines of the blaze, igniting at least two "spot" fires.

The National Weather Service issued a red flag warning through Sunday in the area. (AP)

Former President Bill Clinton talks with host Chris Wallace about Osama bin Laden during an interview for "Fox News Sunday" on Friday in New York.

Clinton Defends Bin Laden Efforts

Former president says he 'worked hard' to have al-Qaeda leader killed

NEW YORK | In a combative interview on "Fox News Sunday," former President Clinton defended his handling of the threat posed by Osama bin Laden, saying he tried to have bin Laden killed and was attacked for his efforts by the same people who now criticize him for not doing enough.

"That's the difference in me and some, including all of the right-wingers who are attacking me now," Clinton said in the interview. "They ridiculed me for trying. They had eight months to try; they did not try."

Clinton accused host Chris Wallace of a "conservative hit job" and asked: "I want to know how many people in the Bush administration you asked, 'Why didn't you do anything about the Cole?'"

I want to know how many people you asked, 'Why did you fire Dick Clarke?'"

He was referring to the USS Cole, attacked by terrorists in Yemen in 2000, and former White House anti-terrorism chief Richard A. Clarke.

Wallace said Sunday he was surprised by Clinton's "conspiratorial view" of "a very nonconfrontational question, 'Did you do enough to connect the dots and go after al-Qaeda?'"

Clinton said he "worked hard" to try to kill bin Laden. "We contracted with people to kill him. I got closer to killing him than anybody's gotten since," he said.

He told Wallace, "And you got that little smirk on your face and you think you're so clever, but I had responsibility for trying to protect this country. I tried and I failed to get bin Laden. I regret it, but I did try and I did everything I thought I responsibly could."

Iraq PM Urges Peace During Holiday

Feuding groups agree to debate bill creating a federated nation

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Iraq's feuding ethnic and sectarian groups agreed Sunday to consider amending the constitution and begin debating legislation to create a federated nation, while the Shiite prime minister appealed for an end to violence during Ramadan.

Despite Nouri al-Maliki's plea for peace, violence killed at least 20 Iraqis and wounded 37 a day before the official start of the Muslim holy month. Two U.S. Marines died in combat in restive Anbar province west of Baghdad, the U.S. military said.

Shiite, Sunni Arab and Kurdish political leaders broke a two-week deadlock and agreed on a compromise that will allow parliament to take up Shiite-proposed draft legislation to permit creation of partly self-ruling regions.

Sunni Arabs have fought the federalism bill, fearing it will splinter the country and deny them a share of Iraq's oil, which is found in the predominantly

But they agreed to a legislative debate after all parties accepted a Sunni demand that a parliamentary committee be set up to study amending the constitution. The committee will be named Sunni Arabs hope to win an amendment that would make it more difficult to establish autonomous regions.

The deal opened the way for Iraq's communities to move ahead politically and solve an impasse that threatened to further sour relations between them. If left unresolved, the deadlock could have further shaken Iraq's fragile democracy and led to more sectarian violence.

Geagea calls war with Israel a 'catastrophe' in rally north of Beirut

BEIRUT, LEBANON | An anti-Syrian Christian leader dismissed Hezbollah's claims of victory in its war with Israel as tens of thousands of his supporters rallied Sunday in a show of strength that highlighted Lebanon's sharp divisions.

The rally north of Beirut came just two days after a massive gathering by the rival Shiite Muslim Hezbollah that attracted hundreds of thousands. The two sides have been at sharp odds over the future of the Lebanese government since this summer's Israeli-Hezbollah war.

Samir Geagea, a notorious former leader of a Christian militia, scoffed at Hezbollah leader Sheik Tens of thousands rallied in favor of Samir Geagea's speech on Sunday.

"I don't feel victory because the majority of the Lebanese people do not feel victory. Rather, they feel that a major catastrophe had befallen them and made their present and future uncertain," he said.

Hezbollah's fight with Israel sent its support soaring among Shiites. But a large sector — particularly Christians and Sunni Muslims — opposes Hezbollah and resents it for provoking the monthlong fight by capturing two Israeli soldiers. The war killed hundreds of Lebanese and left part of the country's infrastructure in ruins, causing billions of dollars in damage to the economy.

Saddam Lawyers Plan Indefinite Boycott of Trial

AMMAN, JORDAN | Saddam Hussein's defense team will boycott his genocide trial indefinitely, his chief lawyer said Sunday, accusing the judges of violating Iraqi law.

The move was unlikely to halt Saddam's second trial, just as a similar walkout had no effect on his first, since the chief judge said he would appoint replacements after the lawyers stormed out of court last week. Proceedings resume Monday.

Still, the boycott could raise further questions about the court, which already was under fire over the replacement of the first chief judge after some Iraqis accused him of allegedly favoring the defense. (AP)

Thai council can seize assets of politicians in former administration

BANGKOK, THAILAND | Thailand's new military rulers on Sunday put teeth into efforts to expose alleged corruption in the government it overthrew, setting up a new anti-graft body with the power to seize assets of guilty politicians.

The military council named a high-level nine-member committee to investigate alleged wrongdoing in the administration of ousted Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra, who is suspected to have transferred some of his wealth abroad before the Sept. 19 coup.

"There is a sufficient evidence to believe that [members of the former government] abused their power to reap benefits for their personal gain, and caused serious damage to the country," the military said in a late-night television

The committee, which has one year to complete its work, also shall forward cases to the attorney general for prosecution, it said.

The military council, officially called the Council for Democratic Reform under the Constitutional Monarchy, also Sunday announced new measures to choke off any possible opposition by banning political activities at the local level.

But under pressure from critics at home and abroad to restore democracy in the Southeast Asian country, it also said an interim civilian government may be announced in the next week.

"The name of the prime minister is expected to be announced late this week at the earliest," army spokesman Akara Thiproj said.

The military had said it would hand over power to civilians within two weeks of the coup, and that a new election would be held by next October. DENIS D. GRAY (AP)

Militants Take Somali Port

Peaceful takeover is latest blow to virtually powerless government

KISMAYO, SOMALIA | Hundreds of heavily armed Islamic militiamen took over the southern town of Kismayo, one of the last seaports that had been outside their control in Somalia, witnesses said Sunday.

"The Islamic courts have entered Kismayo," said resident Abdi Gashan, adding that the warlords who previously ruled the area had fled. "We welcome the Islamic courts."

The peaceful takeover was the latest blow to Somalia's virtually powerless government. The country's defense minister, Col. Barre "Hirale" Aden Shire, had been a leading member of the Juba Valley Alliance that had been ruling Kismayo and was among those who fled.

Hirale's deputy, Yusuf Mire Mohamud, said "the Juba Valley Alliance has collapsed today."

Members of the Islamic group, which the United States accuses of harboring al-Qaeda terrorists, were not immediately available for comment.

Leaders from the Islamic militia — which controls the capital, Mogadishu, along with much of southern Somalia — have been in Kismayo for several days, in direct challenge to the alliance. Fearful residents of the town, some 260 miles southwest of Mogadishu, have been fleeing across the border to Kenya in case fighting breaks out. NASTEEX DAHIR FARAH (AP)

France FM: Bin Laden Not Dead

Officials cast doubt on weekend report of Qaeda leader's demise

PARIS | France's foreign minister said Sunday that, to his knowledge, Osama bin Laden is not dead, the latest official to cast doubt on a leaked French intelligence document suggesting the al-Qaeda leader has died of typhoid.

"To my knowledge, Osama bin Laden is not dead," Philippe Douste-Blazy said in a television interview on the LCI station.

Questions about bin Laden's fate resurfaced with the publication Saturday in a French regional newspaper, l'Est Republicain, of a leaked document from the DGSE secret service. It cited an uncorroborated report from a "usually reliable source" who said Saudi intelligence services were convinced that bin Laden had died of a severe case of typhoid contracted Aug. 23 in Pakistan.

France's Defense Ministry confirmed that the document was not false. But authorities stressed that the information was questionable. (AP)

AU to Send More Troops to Darfur

KHARTOUM, SUDAN | The African Union said Sunday it will send more peacekeeping troops to Sudan's Darfur region and toughen the soldiers' role in protecting civilians while the international community pressures the Sudanese government to allow a U.N. military force.

The underfunded and ill-equipped AU force has had little success in halting ethnic fighting that has killed at least 200,000 people and chased 2.5 million from their homes the past three years. (AP)

Transportation Up for Debate in Va.

Four-day session is set for legislators, but the success is not a surety

RICHMOND, VA. | A year ago, calls for the first long-term, statewide transportation funding solution in a generation dominated political discourse.

This week, legislators finally get around to talking about the issue of transportation in a scheduled four-day session that starts Wednesday, but substantive new state revenue for roads, rails and transit has effectively been ruled out.

And proposals dealing with perpetual gridlock in the most populous regions seem little more than wish lists, hardly assured of success.

About 100 bills ranging from transit funding for the Metro subway and bus system that serves Northern Virginia to a proposal to raise cash from an electronic horse race wagering device await the House and Senate.

But the type of broad, tax-based system that Gov. Kaine and the Senate envisioned a year ago won't survive in a House run by Republicans still solidly resolved against tax increases.

"The question now is, 'How do you get the Senate to understand that we're not going to move in that direction?'" said H. Morgan Griffith of Salem, the House GOP leader.

"What we've got to do is figure out how to get more money into transportation from existing funds," he said.

That's what a three-bill package designed to generate $50 million for the Metro system would do. One bill would generate $30 million a year for northern Virginia. BOB LEWIS (AP)

Md. Health Care Costs May Soar

Federal rules require state to alter current accounting practices

ANNAPOLIS, MD. | Maryland added $100 million to this year's budget to help pay future health care costs for retired teachers and state employees, but it was little more than a symbolic gesture toward solving what may be a $20 billion problem.

New rules imposed by the Government Accounting Standards Board will require state and local governments across the country to change the way they account for health care costs in their employee retirement systems.

The rules do not require governments to come up with the money right away, but beginning in 2008, they will have to estimate the current value of health benefits and how much money will be needed to pay for them in the future.

An actuary hired by Maryland to assess its liability came up with an estimate of $20 billion that could be paid off over 30 years under the new accounting rules. With inflation and other charges, the state might have to kick in $1.5 billion a year or more to comply with the rules change. For comparison purposes, the total state budget this year is just under $30 billion. TOM STUCKEY (AP)

Auto Insurance Rates Dropping in Va.

NORFOLK, VA. | Some of the top auto insurers in the nation are reducing rates in Virginia.

The reasons range from high gas prices to more sophisticated technology with which companies can calculate the risks of insuring drivers. Tougher drunken-driving laws are also driving down rates, analysts said, and safer cars are limiting the human toll of accidents.

Higher gas costs have some drivers scaling back their trips, reducing the likelihood of wrecks and claims, said Etti Baranoff, a professor of insurance and finance at Virginia Commonwealth University.

But companies are also better able to figure out who deserves a lower rate, said Robert Hartwig, chief economist for the Insurance Information Institute. They're using technology to take a look at things like age and model of the car driven, where the driver lives and whether they own a home. (AP)

Watch What's Ahead

There will always be something on with wraparound screens

TV | Researchers have built a room where hundreds of programs appear on a large, wraparound screen. Point and click on a video with a high-tech remote control, and the show immediately leaps to prominence. What's more, other programming of interest lines up, within your line of sight.

The technology, T-Visionarium II, won't be in your home theater anytime soon, but it may be the future of television, said Dennis Del Favero, co-director of the iCinema Center for Interactive Cinema Research at Australia's University of New South Wales.

You're handed a pair of plastic, smoke-colored 3-D glasses and suddenly, hundreds of digital television images begin to swirl around you on a 360-degree movie screen that's 11 feet high.

With the push of a remote control, you select which of up to 22,000 programs you want to watch. With each selection, a computer identifies other programs you might also enjoy and arranges them within your line of sight.

Unlike today's digital video recorders, which use word-based categories such as title and director to make recommendations, T-Visionarium II looks at the underlying structure of each image to pick other shows of interest.

"What we're trying to develop is image-based data mining, which could have revolutionary implications, because instead of relying on words to identify something, you have images," Del Favero said. (AP)

QB throws 22 straight completions against NFL’s worst defense

REDSKINS | Mark Brunell spent all week trying to ignore the criticism. Then spent all of Sunday quieting it. One connection after another, Brunell kept finding holes in the Houston Texans’ shaky defense, breaking an NFL record for consecutive completed passes en route to Washington’s first win. Brunell completed his first 22 throws and Clinton Portis scored two touchdowns in his first start of the season as the Redskins beat Houston 31-15. Washington had scored just one touchdown in its 0-2 start. Against the hapless Houston defense — which entered the game ranked last in the league — the Redskins got things turned around. “It was a tough week — a lot of things being said,” Brunell said. “So you do your best to block those things out and go forward, keep playing hard, keep working hard.” The 36-year-old Brunell set the new record when he found Santana Moss on six-yard pass late in the third quarter. The old record was held by Oakland’s Rich Gannon, who completed 21 straight against Denver on Nov. 11, 2002. Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said they were not aware of the record until Brunell reached 21. Brunell’s first incompletion came two plays later, when Houston’s Travis Johnson batted down a pass intended for Brandon Lloyd. “It’s a nice honor, but the credit should go to the 11 guys who were on the field,” he said. “That’s an offensive team record, really. The receivers were in the right spots, the offensive line did great. We ran the ball like we wanted to.” The Redskins finished with 495 yards to Houston’s 261. Brunell entered the game with a completion rate of 57 percent, sparking calls for his benching. He finished 24-of-27 for 261 yards and a touchdown and completed passes to eight different players. Portis had 16 carries for 86 yards and two receptions for 78 yards against Houston one week after sitting out against Dallas with a shoulder injury. KRISTIE RIEKEN (AP)

→ Best Call: The wide receiver screen to Santana Moss that gave Mark Brunell his 22nd consecutive completion. Instead of taking any unnecessary risks, Gibbs and Saunders made it easy for the QB to get the record. A week after an abysmal offensive performance, Brunell hit eight unique receivers. → Worst Call: Against a team as bad as the Houston Texans, there really are no bad calls. → Best Adjustment: Making the switch from Clinton Portis to Ladell Betts after the game was already in hand ensured the team’s all-important starting running back stayed healthy and will be on the field next week against Jacksonville, when he will certainly be needed.

They seemed to make all the right moves, but it was the Texans after all.

Armas Leads Nats to Win

Starter gives up just 5 hits to lead team past playoff-bound Mets

NATIONALS | Alfonso Soriano's all-around performance helped Tony Armas Jr. win for the first time in seven starts, and the Washington Nationals beat the slumping New York Mets 5-1 Sunday.

Armas pitched six strong innings for his first victory since Aug. 18 and Ryan Zimmerman hit an RBI double for Washington, which sent the NL East champions to their seventh defeat in 10 games.

The Mets have lost four of five to Florida and Washington.

Trying to secure a spot in New York's postseason rotation, Steve Trachsel (15-8) allowed three runs in five-plus innings. He dropped to 1-3 with a 4.91 ERA in his last four starts — not exactly what the Mets were looking for heading into October.

Armas (9-12) gave up five hits, including Jose Valentin's 18th homer. He walked none and struck out four, earning only his third win since coming off the disabled list on July 17. He had been out with a strained right forearm.

Armas was 0-4 in his previous six starts since beating Philadelphia 6-4.

Nationals starting pitcher Tony Armas Jr. gave up five hits to earn just his third win since coming off the disabled list on July 17. He was 0-4 in his last six starts.

Billy Traber, Jon Rauch and Saul Rivera finished the five-hitter. Rauch got through the eighth unscathed thanks to fine plays by right fielder George Lombard and center fielder Ryan Church.

One day after losing first baseman Nick Johnson to a broken right leg, the Nationals got a nice game from Soriano, the first player in major league history with 40 homers, 40 steals and 40 doubles in one season.

He hit a sacrifice fly in the first, doubled and scored in the fifth, and threw out a runner on the bases from left field.

O's Help Twins Near Playoff Berth

Minnesota takes 2 of 3 from Baltimore to stay on top of wild card

ORIOLES | Joe Mauer and Phil Nevin hit two-run homers, and the Minnesota Twins moved closer to sealing a playoff berth by beating the Baltimore Orioles 6-3 Sunday.

Any combination of Minnesota wins or losses by the Chicago White Sox totaling two will ensure the Twins a trip to the postseason.

Minnesota also remained 1 1/2 games behind first-place Detroit in the AL Central. The Tigers clinched no worse than the wild-card berth

Joe Mauer had three hits for the Twins, who beat Baltimore 6-3 on Sunday.

Sunday with an 11-4 win at Kansas City.

Mauer and Luis Castillo had three hits for the Twins, and Nevin finished with three RBIs. Nevin's homer, which made it 6-3 in the eighth, was his first since coming to the Twins from the Chicago Cubs on Aug. 31.

Miguel Tejada hit two solo homers for the Orioles, upping his total to a team-high 24. The first home run was his first since Aug. 20, and it ended a career-high run of 120 at-bats without a homer.

Corey Patterson also homered for Baltimore, which dropped two of three to the Twins and closed its home schedule at 40-41. (AP)

Europe Again Routs at Ryder Cup

Win matches the tournament's largest margin of victory ever

GOLF | Favorites or underdogs in the Ryder Cup, it doesn't matter to the Europeans.

They wanted to win for Darren Clarke and the memory of his wife, for a captain who relied on instincts, for each other. Boasting their best team ever, they backed it up by turning the Ryder Cup into another rout Sunday, winning 18 ½-9 ½ to make history as the first European team to win three straight times.

There's no question who owns this Ryder Cup — the trophy and the tournament.

"I don't know if there's ever been a European team that played better," U.S. captain Tom Lehman said. "Our team came ready. Our team came very ready. I guess we weren't ready enough."

Europe won 8 ½ points from the 12 singles matches — the total the Americans needed for an unlikely comeback — and the final score matched the largest margin of victory, set in 2004 at Oakland Hills.

Only a gesture of sportsmanship kept Europe, which has won five of the last six Ryder Cups, from the biggest rout by either side since this format began in 1979. J.J. Henry needed to make a 25-foot birdie putt to halve his match, and Paul McGinley conceded the putt.

Luke Donald holed a 10-foot par putt that gave Europe 14 points, all it needed to keep the shiny gold trophy. Moments later, Henrik Stenson closed out his match to give his team an outright victory, and the celebration was on.

The tears flowed, too.

Clarke wasn't sure he should play in this Ryder Cup after his wife,

Winning Ways for Weis, Willingham

Irish have their savior, but former coach has triumphed out West

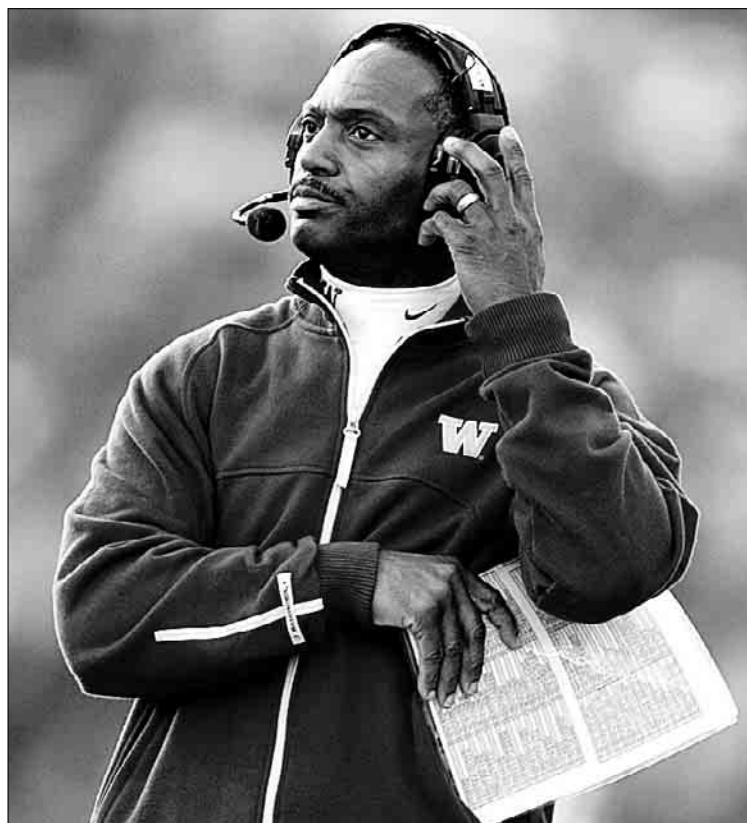

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | As Notre Dame was performing a minor miracle at Michigan State, the former coach of the Fighting Irish was winning again out West with little fanfare.

In fact, for a while Saturday night it looked like the University of Washington's Tyrone Willingham was going to wake up Sunday with a better record than Charlie Weis, the guy who replaced him in South Bend, Ind.

The Fighting Irish saved their season with a stunning comeback. Maybe even more surprising is that Willingham's Huskies, who won only three games the past two seasons, are also 3-1.

Weis put the shine back on the Golden Dome last year, going 9-3 — a record identical to Willingham's first season at Notre Dame. But Weis' 9-3 was good enough to earn a 10-year contract extension.

Make no mistake, there was a

Tyrone Willingham has turned around a Washington program that won just three games in the past two seasons, leading them to an upset of UCLA and a 3-1 record.

difference between Weis' 9-3 and Willingham's. The 2002 Irish were a scrappy squad that rarely outplayed its opponents but took advantage of every break to steal several games. They were outclassed by top-notch teams.

Weis' Irish looked more polished and competed better against elite competition. Still, after 15 games at Notre Dame both were 11-4 and trying to recover from a mauling by Michigan.

Willingham lost game No. 16 to Michigan State. In Weis' 16th game, Notre Dame was down 31-14 at the half against the Spartans before Brady Quinn morphed back into a Heisman Trophy contender, Terrail Lambert earned himself a permanent place in Notre Dame lore with two huge interceptions and the Irish won 40-37.

Willingham is a better fit at Washington than he was at Notre Dame. And Weis, a Notre Dame alum, is better for the Irish than Willingham. So everybody should be happy. RALPH D. RUSSO (AP)

Burton Takes the Chase Lead With Late-Race Pass

It wasn't until six laps were left that Jeff Burton finally scooted by leader Matt Kenseth with the critical pass. Not that he even needed it: Kenseth ran out of gas. Burton took a slim, six-point lead over Jeff Gordon, the polesitter, who finished third. It may be over for the likes of Kasey Kahne, Kyle Busch and Dale Earnhardt Jr. — who all had problems and fell all but out of the Chase. (AP)

Tursunov outlasted Roddick 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 3-6, 17-15 to give the Russians an insurmountable 3-1 lead. (AP)

Stover's Kick Keeps Ravens Perfect

Undefeated Baltimore squeaks by Cleveland on 52-yard field goal

RAVENS | Matt Stover kicked the Ravens to their first 3-0 start since the franchise moved to Baltimore.

Stover booted a 52-yard field goal with 20 seconds left Sunday as the Ravens remained unbeaten with a 15-14 win over the Cleveland Browns.

Stover's 12th career game-winning kick came after Ravens cornerback Chris McAlister intercepted a pass by Cleveland's Charlie Frye in the end zone with 3:21 remaining as the Browns (0-3) were driving.

Baltimore's Steve McNair then went 6-of-9 for 52 yards to set up the 38-year-old Stover, who spent five years in Cleveland but left in 1995 when owner Art Modell moved his franchise to Maryland.

As the kick by Stover, the only former Browns player still on Baltimore's roster, sailed through the uprights, Baltimore's bench erupted in celebration while Cleveland fans bemoaned another er tough loss for the Browns.

Cleveland led 14-3 at halftime and was only one play from putting the game away.

Stover also kicked a pair of 32-yard field goals.

McNair finished 23-of-41 for 264 yards and threw a three-yard TD pass to Todd Heap on the first play of the fourth quarter. The Ravens (3-0) sacked Frye seven times and limited the Browns to just 91 total yards in the second half.

Frye finished 20-of-32 for a career-high 292 yards for the Browns, who were without leading rusher Reuben Droughns (shoulder). TOM WITHERS (AP)

Quarterback Carson Palmer was sacked six times and threw two interceptions, but helped the Bengals beat the hated Steelers.

Palmer Gets Revenge vs. Steelers

FOOTBALL | He hated the eight months of rehabilitation, and the team that made him go through it. Carson Palmer didn't play the way he wanted against the team he dislikes the most, but the result couldn't have been more satisfying.

Alternating between brilliant and awful, the Cincinnati quarterback threw two touchdown passes to T.J. Houshmandzadeh less than a minute apart midway through the fourth quarter following Pittsburgh Steelers turnovers and the unbeaten Bengals rallied for a 28-20 victory Sunday over the Super Bowl champions.

"We're a better team than we were last year and we expected to come in here and win this game, but it took everything we had," running back Rudi Johnson said.

Especially from Palmer, whose focus has been on the Steelers almost since the moment Kimo von Oelhoffen tore apart his knee early in Pittsburgh's playoff victory in January. Palmer had three fumbles, two interceptions and was sacked six times, yet overcame them with four touchdown passes while going 18-of-26 for 193 yards.

"I didn't take anything personal into this game," said Palmer, who during the offseason said how much he hated the Steelers. "I came in here thinking it's a divisional game and let's get a win." ALAN ROBINSON (AP)

Saints Fans Ready For Homecoming

It's been more than a year since the team has had a home game

FOOTBALL | A gleaming white dome hovers above the Big Easy, a symbol of rebirth amid all the rubble. And when the New Orleans Saints return to the Superdome, they'll be carrying the hopes of all those people who still live in trailers parked alongside their gutted-out homes, who vow to rebuild when it would be so much easier to give up on their beloved hometown.

Derryl Welch came back to New Orleans about a month ago, having spent a year in Atlanta and Houston after Hurricane Katrina roared ashore, the levees broke and water poured into the Lower Ninth Ward. On Monday night, he plans to set up a television outside his temporary home-on-wheels to cheer on the Saints.

For three hours, at least, he'll be able to forget about the devastation all around him — the caved-in homes, the abandoned cars, the boarded-up businesses, the poignant symbols such as an overturned tricycle among the overgrown weeds, a reminder of what life was like before Katrina washed it away.

All that matters is the Saints

won their first two games — and they're coming home.

"If they keep winning, it will be a rebirth," said Douglas Taylor, pastor of the Bethel AME Church, which has resumed holding services in the Lower Ninth Ward even though it has to use someone else's sanctuary and most of its members have scattered around the county. "It brightens things up a little bit. Everything is not life and death when the Saints are playing. It shows there's still a positive side to life." (AP)

Entertainment

THE STUFF OF NOVELS: ABC's "Ugly Betty" is based on an innovative Colombian telenovela that has aired in 74 countries.

America's Story

In 'Ugly Betty,' the child of immigrants straddles cultures

IMPORTS | You could choose to focus on the way "Ugly Betty" looks. After all, the title of this new ABC comedy prods you in that direction. But there's something more meaningful cooking on this series than the fact that its star, America Ferrera, is hiding her beauty under bushy eyebrows, braces and a mousy wardrobe.

"Ugly Betty" centers on 22-year-old Betty Suarez, a homely college grad who grew up in the Queens borough of New York and dreams of landing a plum job in publishing in Manhattan.

In the pilot, Betty sort of gets what she wants: She's hired as an assistant to the editor of fashion publication Mode. It's a "Devil Wears Prada" sort of setup that will pit her against the pretty people and their superficial world. And it's the sort of contrast that made "Yo Soy Betty la Fea," the Colombian series on which it's based, one of the most popular telenovelas ever.

Woven into Ferrera's role is the story of a first-generation U.S. Latina straddling cultures, a young woman as rooted in her Hispanic upbringing as she is in her American belief that anything can be accomplished with hard work. At home, Betty helps her immigrant widowed father (Tony Plana) deal with his frustrating HMO; at work, with her ingenuity, she saves her boss (Eric Mabius) from losing an important client, even though he has treated her dismissively.

By not harping on Betty's ethnic background but reflecting the reality of what it feels like to grow up as both an insider and outsider in two cultures, "Ugly Betty" distinguishes itself from other shows on broadcast television.

The youngest of six children who grew up in Southern California with their Honduran mother, Ferrera was proud of her heritage but wanted more than anything to fit in with her peers. Her mother spoke to all the kids in Spanish, and they spoke to her in English because nobody in the neighborhood was speaking Spanish then.

"I went to tons of bar and bat mitzvahs and I've never been to a quinceanera," Ferrera said. She wanted to convert to Judaism "because it was the cool thing to do. ... When you are first-generation, you have roots. But then you have the society that you're supposed to blend into. It's that quarrel between how much do I compromise on each side and still understand who I am?" MARIA ELENA FERNANDEZ (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

A Band at Home Anywhere

'The Town and the City' is a fine addition to Los Lobos' oeuvre

MUSIC | Among the most durable of bands, Los Lobos continues to explore the human condition through music, be it R&B, blues, straight-ahead rock, or norteno and other styles from Mexico and elsewhere in Latin America and the Caribbean.

The band's latest, "The Town and the City" (Hollywood Records), memorializes what it means to survive and, in the process, to lose one home in search of another as Los Lobos chronicles the often-dangerous passage of Mexicans to "El Norte" and what awaits them.

"The Town and the City" represents Los Lobos at some of its philosophical best, dispensing well-crafted electrified music from a weathered, wiser band. It displays the almost resigned mood and quiet strength that has colored more of Los Lobos' work since the release in 1992 of "Kiko," the band's obra maestra of cohesive diversity.

"Town" is characteristic of Los Lobos: It offers rock, reggae and much more.

Even so, Los Lobos proves again that it still can rock on the anthemic "The Road to Gila Bend" and "Two Dogs and a Bone." Rich, electronic tone marks songs such as "Hold On," the hymn-like, appreciative "Little Things," the operatic "The City" and the dark "The Town." "No Puedo Mas," meanwhile, ventures into reggaespanol and guitar-driven Latin R&B in break-time. STEVE BURKHOLDER (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

CAN YOU KILL 'EM WITH KINDNESS? The fact that there are endless ways to "kill" zombies in "Dead Rising" helps keep it fresh.

Killing the Fun

'Dead Rising': Offing zombies is cool, but the game has flaws

THE UNDEAD | A workout is one way to burn off some anxiety. For wound-up video gamers, though, it's more fun to plow through endless waves of zombies.

"Dead Rising" (for Xbox 360) delivers the chance to do just that, but one terrible design decision often makes the experience more infuriating than pleasurable.

Let's start with what's good: It's a zombie game! "Dead Rising" redefines crowd control, throwing up hundreds of lumbering corpses at once on screen.

You play as Frank West, a freelance photojournalist who helicopters into a small town overcome with zombies. He has 72 hours (these are faster game hours) to snap pictures and escape.

The gameplay occurs in a suburban shopping mall. You'll have access to a wide array of products to smash those nasty former humans. Pistols and crowbars certainly get the job done, but there are even more effective tools if you can find them, such as snowblowers.

But you'll inevitably be overwhelmed by hungry zombies at some point. And you will die.

Hopefully, you remembered to save. For some unimaginable reason, "Dead Rising" only provides for one game save on the console's hard drive.

Worse, you can't save wherever you please. Instead, you have to run back to the start of the game (and wait through a litany of long loading screens) or find a restroom in the mall to record your progress. It really kills the fun in an otherwise decent, lighthearted zombie game.

NEVER SAY NEVER: It looks as if the lure of the limelight is too much for George Michael to resist. He kicked off his first tour in 15 years with a European gig in which he crooned, performed his disco-y hits and indulged in political snarkage.

Out of the Ordinary

On NBC, fantastic 'Heroes' will get the world out of this mess

NICE DREAMS | You need only watch the evening news to realize the world is in danger. But to find anyone who can save it, you may have to turn to "Heroes," NBC's latest leap into serialized storytelling.

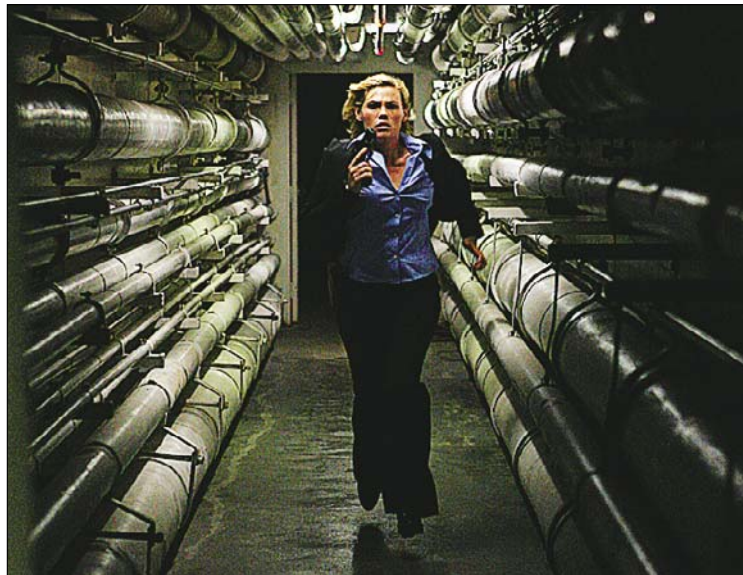

The show, which premieres at 9 p.m. tonight, chronicles a small group of seemingly ordinary teens and twentysomethings scattered around the globe who discover they possess astonishing traits.

"I think everybody has the feeling now that the world is becoming a place that is overly complicated and difficult to figure out — global warming, diminishing resources and terrorism," said Tim Kring, the show's creator and executive producer. "The show's basic premise is that nature is providing the next evolutionary rung by populating the planet with people who are discovering their new abilities."

The hour-long pilot introduces a stable of angst-ridden characters alternately troubled and excited by their still well-cloaked powers. And it makes a tacit promise that they will somehow meet someday.

Making a character fly, say, or spontaneously regenerate a mangled hand requires a fair amount of special effects. So does creating the illusion that parts of the show were shot in Tokyo, New York and London, though all the filming was in Los Angeles. But don't expect the show to be a weekly special-effects fest. "We can't compete with a $200 million feature film," Kring said. "We're going to use them sparingly."

"Heroes" has been compared to "X-Men," but Kring said the show was actually inspired by Pixar's "The Incredibles" and Charlie Kaufman's "Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind." "I'm not a comic book guy," said Kring, who also worked on "Chicago Hope," "Providence" and "Crossing Jordan."

At the show's heart, he explained, is answering the question everyone faces. "I really liked the idea of taking these Kafkaesque, hyper-anonymous characters and infusing them with special abilities and have them deal with the existential meaning of their lives — to figure out what is their purpose. It's something all people can tap into."

Family on the Go

'Runaway' involves a clan staying one step ahead of trouble

Leslie Hope plays Lily, the resourceful wife of Paul Rader (Donnie Wahlberg), a former hot-shot lawyer who claims to have been framed for a murder. Somebody, or some agency, wanted him dead, so he skipped bail before his case came to trial. The mystery behind his ordeal is revealed in flashbacks that seem to be triggered every time he logs onto his high-tech PDA.

The action picks up when Lily, Paul and teens Henry (Dustin Milligan) and Hannah (Sarah Ramos) and young Tommy (Nathan Gamble) arrive in a quiet Iowa town. It takes a series of lies and evasions to get them settled into school and for Paul to score a low-profile job with under-the-table wages. If this weren't scary enough, we see a crack team of FBI agents dedicated to their capture.

"Runaway" does a good job of balancing regular teenage angst with the abnormal paranoia of the Rader family's fugitive saga. After all, every family has secrets. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

FRIPPERY: The “most hated woman in France” is now popular in the U.S.

CULT CHOICE

A needy patient (Bill Murray) gets too close to his therapist (Richard Dreyfuss) in WHAT ABOUT BOB? (10 p.m., AMC). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Purveyor of extreme county fair cuisine shares frying secrets

The hungry and the curious follow the greasy, but alluring, scent of batter frying in hot oil to Charlie Boghosian's stand at the Los Angeles County Fair in Pomona, Calif.

The menu stops them in their tracks: deep-fried Twinkies, deep-fried Oreos, deep-fried avocados, deep-fried pickles, deep-fried olives and more.

Boghosian sees himself as not just a fried-food salesman, but as a fried-food innovator. He recently saw possibilities in churros, the already deep-fried sugary treat. He bought one at a nearby stand and took it to his trailer, where he cut it into four pieces. He mixed the pieces in wet pancake batter and dunked them into a frying vat filled with 370-degree soybean oil.

After two minutes, the churros were crisp, golden pillows. Boghosian scooped them onto a wax paper tray and doused them in chocolate syrup, powdered sugar and rainbow sprinkles.

"It's good," Boghosian said after taking a bite. "But I think I've got to stuff some nuts in there. I'm thinking walnuts. And cheese. Yeah, a sweet, Greek cheese. I bet that would be phenomenal."

At 37, Boghosian has become one of the nation's most esteemed practitioners of extreme fair food. He's part of a wave of vendors who have helped breathe new life into state and county fairs with their artery-clogging culinary oddities.

At the State Fair of Texas — known for introducing the first corn dog in 1942 — a vendor who won the best-taste category last year for his deep-fried peanut butter, jelly and banana sandwiches has stolen headlines again this year for inventing deep-fried Coke (essentially, fried batter made from the soda).

Other items making the rounds include deep-fried macaroni and cheese, deep-fried spaghetti and deep-fried cosmopolitans — a pastry filled with cheesecake and topped with cranberry glaze.

But even rival fair food investors admit that no one takes it as seriously as Boghosian. "Charlie would fry his watch if he knew people would pay to eat it," said Rich Brander, a fellow L.A. County Fair vendor.

When not behind his fryer, Boghosian has been busy the last few weeks giving interviews for radio and TV shows.

HIGH-FRYING ADORED: Charlie Boghosian's latest culinary creation is the Krispy Kreme Chicken and Swiss sandwich.

He's already experimenting with some new ideas for 2007: deep-fried vanilla wafers and deep-fried Fig Newtons. Boghosian said he had success the other day peeling a peach, placing a scoop of ice-cream where the pit would have been, and then battering and deep-frying it.

"You can't just fry anything," said Boghosian. "It has to look good, it has to taste good, and it has to be so different that people will be in awe."

Boghosian brushes off health concerns, such as the calories in his chicken-and-doughnut sandwich. With a laugh, he said: "We fry the fat out of it." DAVID PIERSON

Fast Town, Dull Wine

In Las Vegas, the food is exquisite but the wine lists are not

Sommelier Darren Lutz could have moved anywhere in the world for his next job after Bastide in Los Angeles temporarily closed its doors in January, but he headed for Las Vegas. Opportunities for sommeliers are everywhere in this neon-lighted, restaurant-rich corner of the Nevada desert.

But there's a catch, he discovered. As they strive to develop wine lists that measure up to the world-class food being served in the city, sommeliers face serious obstacles unique to Vegas. They are discovering that they must challenge the distribution system and an old-boy business culture.

Multimillion-dollar wine shipments being turned away at the door, rumors of reprisals against people who dare to go around a behemoth distributor, sommeliers denied access to the wines they want — these are signs of the difficulties Las Vegas sommeliers face.

WILLIAM SHERER
WINE DIRECTOR, AUREOLE

The sommelier community in Las Vegas is big and rich. The demand for wine pros soared as the city evolved into an extraordinary culinary tourist attraction, with more than 30 restaurants with connections to celebrity chefs opening in the last decade.

In Las Vegas, sommeliers can take home $100,000 a year, twice what they'd receive in San Francisco or Los Angeles.

But although hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of wine flows through the Strip each year, the scene is stuck in the days of the $3.99 buffet. It can be impossible to get exciting wines.

“Sommeliers are extremely frustrated with the difficulty of building a great wine list in Las Vegas,” said William Sherer, a master sommelier and wine director at Aureole, New York chef Charlie Palmer's restaurant at the Mandalay Bay Resort. “Wine has dramatically lagged behind food here. It's a real disservice to consumers.”

The unusual wines they do get might take months to arrive, while the same wine would be delivered in a few days to a Los Angeles restaurant. And wholesale prices are often 30 percent higher in Las Vegas than in Los Angeles or New York.

A single wine distributor, Southern Wine & Spirits, dominates the Strip. And that, said master sommelier Paul Roberts, is the problem. Without competition, Southern has little incentive to improve.

At least two master sommeliers are confronting Las Vegas' entrenched wine culture head-on by starting distribution companies that offer eclectic collections of hard-to-find wines. Ambitious sommeliers are rejecting the status quo to patronize them.

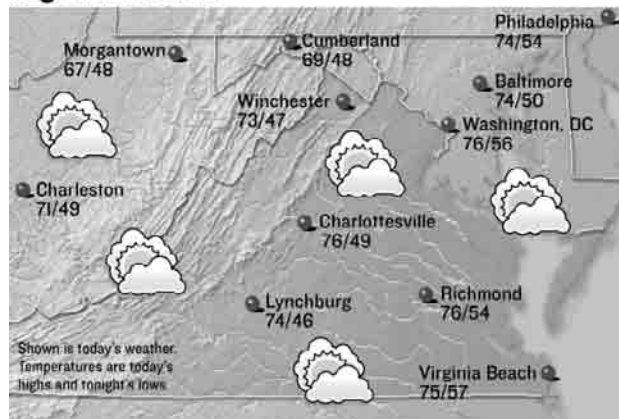

But, says Larry Ruvo, senior managing director for Southern's Nevada office, the good chefs know Vegas' visitors don't want “some razzle-dazzle list of wines no one has ever heard of.” Those 4,000-item wine lists are intimidating to customers. “I'd be hard-pressed, if I owned a restaurant, to have more than 750 items, tops.” And Ruvo's list would focus on brand names. “People want what they know,” he said.

LONDON

KIRSTY WIGGLESWORTH/AP

KANE OF MANY COLORS: Minidresses in lemon yellow, black and pale blue, patchwork and fire-engine red (below) are cute, suggestive and hard to pull off.

Kane Is Able

Scottish designer rocks his first runway show

Leaving rip roaring, obsessional and decidedly sexy Christopher Kane collection on the Wednesday of London Fashion Week, one was reminded of why it's great to come to the U.K. season — the pleasure of seeing great raw young talent.

Kane, a precocious 26-year-old talent from Motherwell, Scotland, creates sexy, structured clothes whose technical skill belie his early years. His graduate collection from St Martins last season won him the Harrods Award for design and a job as a consultant to Donatella Versace in Milan; the runway debut confirms him as a great new talent.

Considering his age, Kane is an outlandishly assured designer. His collection contained no pants or suits, but his score and a half of naughtily erotic minidresses packed exceptional punch.

Composed of bands of skin-tight horizontal strips, lacerated with lace or nylon chords and finished with punchy brass rings, these are not clothes for the faint of heart. Stretched around the models, cut right up to the crotch, toughened up with chunky belts and made in an acid hues, they screamed for attention. Suggestive and erotic, none of them are an easy wear; but what a stylistic statement all the same.

Created in day-glow hues of purple, lemon and rose, freely raiding Kandinsky's bold block color designs, and worn with saucy booties, this collection had only one ultimate direction — the boudoir.

The clothes did echo earlier ideas by Herve Leger and, understandably, Versace, but Kane's ebullient imagination and naïve futurism gave this fashion his own remarkable DNA.

"I've been obsessed with lace and ruffles forever," Kane said. He explained that he had created the couture-like webs and strands that covered his dresses with his sister and design partner Tammy.

Backstage, the young designer greeted journalists attired in black jeans, a gray sweater, a white T-shirt and a gold Vogue pendant.

"I suppose it is a wee bit precious to wear the Vogue logo. But it was a 21st birthday present from me mum," beamed Kane.

Matchy-Matchy Microwaves

If your home decor is best described as "early garage sale, with accents of parents' giveaways," then the NEW MICROWAVES FROM VIKING RANGE (prices vary, Bray & Scarff, 5715 Lee Hwy., Arlington; 703-534-2800) are not for you. If, however, your KitchenAid mixer matches your toaster, which matches your blender, which matches the magnets on your fridge, then the 14 new colors will please your obsessive-compulsive eyes. Looking for a women's motorcycle jacket that'll fit underneath your tasteful business suit? Yeah, neither is anyone else. Nevertheless, a product has arisen from the void to fill this alleged need: the INVISIBLE ARMOR JACKET ($249, cameleon apparel.com). Don't get too excited — it's not really invisible. Cameleon claims the padded, Lycra-blend garment is unnoticeable when worn under clothing, yet is as effective in a crash as bulkier competitors. But seriously, if you can't look like Marlon Brando in "The Wild One," what's the point of riding a motorcycle at all? FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

Sad Anonymous Bloggers

MISERY | Some bloggers will share just about any facet of their personal lives. But sometimes there's that bit of information that's too intimate or embarrassing even for that kind of forum — a story they'd like to tell, but not attach their name to. Now there's a new place specifically for that kind of sharing-but-not-sharing. It's called BlogAnon.

Started in January, it was meant to be a place for anyone to share his or her thoughts anonymously — the blog's username and password are listed. But so far, BlogAnon (BLOG-ANON.BLOGSPOT.COM) is a black hole of depression. Take this nugget: "I want to leave my husband, but I don't because it'd just be too complicated right now. The kids, house, the cars, the dog ... so instead I've just accepted my life of unhappiness [sic] and mediocrity. I don't love him anymore, but he hasn't noticed. I fake my way through the time we spend together and go to bed miserable every night." Uplifting, eh?

Fall TV Premieres

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday to discuss the latest round of premieres, including NBC's "The Office" and Aaron Sorkin's "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip."

Am I the only one who was disappointed by "The Office" season premiere? Maybe it was removing Jim from the rest of the regular cast, or maybe the extraordinarily painful scene in the conference room, but something felt off to me. Did they change writers?

Some liked it, some hated it. It will be interesting to see how NBC keeps this show going since Ricky Gervais had the good sense to end his version after a short run by U.S. standards.

I am a big "Gilmore Girls" fan. The Internet is abuzz now with tons of spoilers about the upcoming season, and many fans seem really upset with the supposed plot lines. Do you think viewers will really tune out if the story lines don't meet their approval?

I don't think it will hurt the show. It only demonstrates how hugely invested in the show these people are. I'm guessing they continue to watch and continue to complain.

I think they should treat TV shows kind of like members of Menudo. When you top five seasons, you get the ax.

Mostly, that sounds great. Sometimes, but not often, you'll see a series that rebounds in a later season. Now I'm trying to think of one.

I really wanted to like "Studio 60." But what's with the casting of the female characters? We're supposed to believe Amanda Peet is experienced enough to be a president of a division? And what's with the Christian singer/sketch comedian?

Christian singer/sketch comedian is thinly veiled Kristen Chenoweth — she was on "The West Wing" and dated Aaron Sorkin. And Amanda Peet is doing a dead-on Jamie Tarses, who was a very hot development exec at NBC who became the president of programming at ABC. Think of "Studio 60" as Sorkin's therapy — and you've got to watch. It's more fun that way.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may surprise friends with a decision that seems to them to come out of the blue — but you know you've been preparing for some time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You must use discipline when it comes to spending; stay within the budget you've established for yourself. Avoid temptation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may be more dramatic than usual, but every effort to win the attention of others is likely to pay off at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may not realize you've reached a major milestone — until someone close to you broadcasts the news. A new phase is about to begin.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your native common sense will come in handy. Someone may try to steer you away from your chosen path, but it just won't feel right.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) This is a good day to put your instincts to the test; even if you do make the wrong choice, the risks are few and you can change your mind.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're not about to put up with being told what to do. You'll insist on being in charge of your own affairs — even if you're ill prepared.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others must tread softly if they wish to avoid provoking you into a reaction that is too much to handle. You're near the edge.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may not be in the mood to embrace opportunities with your usual enthusiasm. Indeed, this is a good time for some solitary contemplation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're going to have to keep tabs on your own desires at this time if you expect to maintain control. Self-discipline is a needed asset.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll find it's more than taste that tells the tale. You must be able to admit when something meets your expectations, and when it doesn't.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Inner strength is more valuable to you than any physical abilities. The time has come, once again, for you to stand your ground.

Day Laborers Stealing Jobs

IN RESPONSE TO REMOVING day laborers from a Gaithersburg shopping center ("Laborers Looking for Work Moved," Sept. 21), day-laborer advocate the Rev. David Rocha complained, "Their only criminal act is to stand here and try to find a job to bring bread to their families." But what day laborers are doing is a form of stealing since many of them are here illegally, meaning they've stolen their way into this country. And they are doing jobs Americans might do, so they are also stealing jobs from Americans.
